July 2010

From the President

Thank you to everyone who made our June 6 annual meeting such a success. I was pleased that we had such a strong turnout—one-third of our membership attended for lunch and participation in our church's governance, well above the 25 percent mandated for a quorum. We elected Mike Felton and Ash Roberts to serve on next year's board. (I am very pleased to add that at the June board meeting, runner-up candidate Kim Talbot was appointed to fill the slot vacated by David Brewer, who begins his term as president-elect this year.) We also elected LaRilla Combs, Brandy Niblett, and Courtney Ruthven to serve on our nominating committee, the first to serve on a 12-month term. I am grateful to all these individuals—new and familiar—for agreeing to serve our church in these critical roles.

As I hope I made clear at the meeting, I loved putting together and presenting the volunteer recognition event, and especially love the fact that there are so many people to honor in years ahead. Immediately following the annual meeting, Trina Wheeler, our new president, asked me to head up the volunteer recognition event for next year, and I am delighted to do so. I welcome nominations later this year.

I am very pleased that Charlie Jenney has continued to pursue vendor bidding and mechanical details of the gate to be installed on the north drive. At the June board meeting, Charlie presented cost and vendor options, and the board voted to accept the bid from the Wichita Fence Company. I will work with Trina to ensure that we communicate our plans to neighborhood residents before the gate is in place. In perusing old board minutes, I note that board discussions about traffic through our lot have taken place throughout the entire three years I have served in this body; I am gratified that actions toward the gate's completion took place before I left office. Progress!

Also at June's board meeting was discussion of logistical options for the new lights (maybe even solar-powered!) to be installed for the front of the building in my honor. As this is my last opportunity to reach you, my captive audience, from this bully pulpit, I will ask your indulgence for the remainder of this paragraph. While I wish I had inherited more of my mother's skills and attributes, I did inherit a few of them, including the joy I derive from giving. So, before this year, I had few church experiences that rivaled the pleasure I took from selecting, purchasing, and publicly presenting the tree in honor of last year's departing president, Marsha Diggs, at our 2009 annual meeting. But I must confess to you now that being on the receiving end of this gift—the thought that went into it, its magnitude, its

Guest Presenters in July

7/11 - Kalen Fristad is an ordained United Methodist Minister. After serving churches in Iowa for 27 years he embarked upon an independent ministry. He conducted this ministry full time from 2003-2006. It consisted of traveling around the country with his wife, Darlene, accepting invitations to speak to churches and other groups, countering the teaching that many people will suffer for eternity in hell and instead, proclaiming the hopeful message of universalism. He went back to the parish ministry in July 2006. As of January 2008, while continuing to serve churches in Iowa part-time, he resumed his traveling ministry, spending half time on the road speaking on the subject of universalism.

7/18 - Deanna Harms is from The Greteman Group. If you haven't seen the cards around town or the ads in the newspaper for their "Do The Deed" campaign, you can learn more about this effort at www.gretemangroup.com.

A note of Sorrow

We are saddened by the death of Jackie Erickson who passed away Friday, May 14, 2010. Jackie and her husband, Woody, joined the Church in 1998 and had been very active members until health problems prevented them from attending Church. Jackie served on the Worship committee, enjoyed the Dinners for Eight and participated in many other activities of the Church.

Minister's Musings

Don't Want No Empty Visions

I stop at the door. On the other side, a man is shouting. "That's just it. That's your problem! You never gave your heart to anyone. Not once! Not to me. Not to the children. You've never known what it means to love and now it's too late!"

It sounds bad from the doorway where I lurk. As the hospice chaplain, I have come to visit a man who is hours or minutes away from death. I strain to hear more, hoping the bitter exchange might provide a clue to helping me assuage the anguish of those inside.

A woman sobs. "And how would you know, Ray? How would you know? When did you ever have time for me, or for anyone or anything other than numero uno?"

Enough! I knock and slip through the door, hopeful that my training and experience will afford the combatants some respite from their anguish. But inside there are no combatants. Except for a shriveled man lying unconscious in the tidy hospital bed, there is no one to confront. Only the TV.

The flap continues. "Are you going to pretend that you loved the kids? Maybe you think money equals love and that that was all they wanted, or all they needed, but you're wrong, Ray. After a moment's pause, "Get out, Ray! I never want to see you again. Get out!"

I move to switch it off, but I can't. I'm hooked.

They face off, Ray and his furious partner, intent on venting their rage. I am being pulled in. But no! I have come to comfort a dying man, not to be entertained. Still, the glamour is formidable and I am momentarily attracted –vicarious wealth, the ghost of aesthetic beauty, the strutting of Vanity Fair's inmates – a smorgasbord of distractions and delectable illusions. I struggle against the undertow of subliminal messages that pulls me from my purpose. Then I turn it off.

True, these tinsel soap stars are a more pleasing sight than the dying man. But they aren't real! Recently, a couple in Suwon, South Korea was indicted by police for the death by negligence of their infant daughter –the child died of dehydration and malnourishment while the parents doted twelve hours a day on their virtual baby, a computer generated figment of cyberspace, leaving their flesh and blood child to cry for love and attention to no avail.

Except for the dying man's breathing, sound is now conspicuous by its absence. I scan the room. A neatly handwritten card with a Biblical quote, a visiting minister's calling card, and other items confirm for me what I had suspected from a prior reading of the man's chart. He is a practicing Christian. I draw close to the man's bedside and lean in to his ear to identify myself by name and occupation. Even though he is unresponsive, I know that he can still hear my words. I propose reading from scripture. After a moment, in a soft but audible voice, I read into his ear: "Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his faithful love endures forever. Give thanks to the God of gods, for his faithful love endures forever. Give thanks to the Lord of lords, for his faithful love endures forever."

He revives at these words despite the fatigue and debilitation brought on by his imminent death. His aged face turns towards my voice, full of eagerness and attention. Eyebrows that had previously been motionless now quiver and arch in the direction of my intonation. His closed eyes flutter and dart behind the lids, indicating rapt attention to the messages I share. "Even darkness to you is not dark, and night is as clear as the day. You created my inmost self, knit me together in my mother's womb. For so many marvels I thank you; a wonder am I, and all your works are wonders." Minutes slip by until abruptly his breathing ceases. I look up from my text and realize I am alone. He is gone. I pull the cord to summon the nurse. Moments pass and the nurse appears. She probes for vital signs and finding them absent, confirms his death.

What is it that we want to fix our attention on when it is our time to leave this world? The dying man heard me turn off one TV and turn on another. From my lips, he heard an outpouring of Transcendental Vision (TV) that was framed in a lexicon he was steeped in, and this moved him in his last moments to hope and joy. Just as he was helped at the ultimate moment, I too want to be comforted and edified by TV (transcendental visionaries) when I am at death's door. Read to me, then, inspired words from Margaret Fuller, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Theodore Parker, or Olympia Brown. Read to me from Khalil Gibran, Rumi, William Blake, Bhaktivinod Thakur, and the Gita. But by all means, turn off that spurious other TV, that empty vision, that MTV.

symbolic meaning, and, especially, our genuine need for it—has brought me even greater pleasure. I now know the pleasure of receiving, and I thank you all from the bottom of my heart.

The other significant item of discussion at June's board meeting was of the June 26 Restoring Our Community March through neighborhoods in central northeast Wichita, spearheaded by the NAACP, to walk "past the sites where our young men and women have lost their lives to senseless violence... to march, sing, and pray, and recall that spirit of the community we used to be... march together, arm-in-arm, and work together to bring about the rebirth of our community spirit." Participation is contingent on our commitment to start an outreach program to benefit the target neighborhoods of this march, and I am gratified that even with this (admirable!) stipulation that marchers follow through with real action, the board agreed to participate in the activity. I'm personally a little irritated at my husband, outgoing board member Corey Swertfager, for insisting on participating as an officer of Wichita NOW rather than a First UU representative, but I'm happy that we are involved, even if Corey will be a little further down the street from us.

I thank the 2009-10 board for all your help and support this past year; I don't know how I would have made my way without you. For any of our members who have not taken on the role of presidency, I encourage you to consider it—even if, as was the case with me, your instinct when approached by a member of the nominating committee is to run screaming in the opposite direction. You will grow in ways you never imagined; you will come to know yourself much more deeply—in ways not always happy, but always insightful; and you will discover at an intimate level how much energy, integrity, and love pulse through the people who inhabit our church. It's an opportunity not to be missed, so please do consider future leadership with First UU.

Thank you! And shine on!

Annie Welsbacher, Outgoing President

Meditation and Book Discussion Tuesday, 6 p.m., Bob Feleppa, 304-9170

The Book Discussion group has chosen as its book for July Little Bee by Chris Cleave. On a beach in Nigeria, the lives of Little Bee, a teenager from a small village, and Sarah O'Rourke, editor of a posh British women's magazine, are brought into brutal conjunction. Chris Cleave's Little Bee works because the unflinching, brutal story balances an outwardly political motive with rich, deep character development (and even some welcome humor), focusing narrowly on events before broadening to reveal some larger truths. You are welcome to join us at 7:30 on Wednesday, July 14 at the home of Joe Brewer for lively discussion whether you have read the book or not.

Eclectic Readers will meet at 11:30 on Friday, July 16 for lively discussion and lunch. The groups has chosen Fences, "a 1983 play by American playwright August Wilson. Set in the 1950s, it is the sixth in Wilson's ten-part Pittsburgh Cycle. Like all of the Pittsburgh plays, Fences explores the evolving African-American experience and examines race relations, among other themes. The play earned Wilson the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for Drama and a Tony Award for Best Actor for James Earl Jones."

This is an open group. If you are available over the noon hour, bring a lunch and join us.

Movie Night will be Monday, July 19th at 7pm. The movie will be Distant, a Turkish film by director Nuri Bilge Ceylan that won the Grand Jury Prize at Cannes in 2003. The lead actors won best actor awards. The movie portrays a common human condition with beauty and subtlety. For more information, contact Kathryn Vernon at 269-0525.

The retreat will be canceled in case of rain. Please call Del, 612-0826, if you have questions. (The regular third Saturday retreat will be held as usual.)
